Sad, fat boy in pirate hat.
Long, old, dented,
copper-colored Ford.
How many traits
must a thing have
in order to be singular?
(Echo persuades us
everything we say
has been said at least once before.)

Two plump, bald men
in gray tee-shirts
and tan shorts
are walking a small bulldog – followed by the eyes of an invisible third person.
The Trinity was born
from what we know
of the bitter
symbiosis of couples.
Can we reduce echo’s sadness by synchronizing our speeches?
Is it the beginning or end of real love
when we pity a person
because, in him,
we see ourselves?
